Our Approach

At Strategos we take on the philosophy of “the building block approach” to skills development. We recognize the importance of utilizing core skill sets as the cornerstone of our training programs and courses and to begin building advance skill sets as an individual, as well as a team. Our staff is comprised of skilled training developers with decades of instructional design, technology, and training development experience. We apply and adapt military/industry processes to develop materials for all methods of training delivery. We assess performance and retention factors to design a training product with the appropriate length, taxonomy, delivery mode, delivery frequency, and learning measurement outcomes. Training solutions are documented in Design Documents and training material development/authoring implements the approved design.

Our training concept provides a “Full Spectrum” training capability, where the training development team leverages various training delivery media across the spectrum from low-tech, expedient, or traditional training delivery media through computer-enhanced instructional technologies to meet training requirements. These capabilities ensure we can effectively analyze and prepare training courseware, program of instruction, lesson plans, practical exercises, and train-the-trainer packages to accommodate a wide variety of training program environments.

All training programs include training evaluations that measure course effectiveness. Tailored instructional development methodologies and doctrine are used to develop the module-specific courses that include breakdowns of lesson plans and pre- and post-test training evaluations. Training is delivered via classroom, practical, and field training exercises.

Our Team

We have established and maintained a sterling record of safely providing highly trained tactical forces with specialized skills. While most requirements are clearly articulated and are built on a precedent of success, we strongly believe that our years of military experience sets us apart from other companies. Our key personnel while on active duty have fulfilled key positions such as Executive Officer, Training Officer, Combatant Craft Patrol Officers, Boat Captains, Engineers, and Officer in Charge of two United States Navy Schools. We offer this experience not as a means to the only answer to the transformation of training, but rather to emphasize that our desire is to work with Navy commands and to continuously seek ways to assist in the development of world-class training programs, Personnel Qualification Standards Programs, and a doctrine that will produce the most highly qualified personnel to fill critical positions throughout the Navy.
